Part II: Reading Comprehension

Albert's Great Life

My name is Albert and I am a box turtle. I am an exceptional reptile because turtles do not write stories. I have decided to let people know a little more about box turtles.

I move rather slowly at my age. It has not always been that way though. Why, when I was hatching, I could speed across my yard in no time. I will admit that I got stuck on an occasional twig or garden hose, but I was certainly not a quitter. My little legs would just keep going until I overcame any obstacle. As I grew, I learned to slow down and enjoy all the interesting sights and sounds my environment provided. I have discovered “bug holes”, found the juiciest berries, and can tell when my owner is coming to play.

When my owner approaches, I stretch out my long neck to reveal my beautiful colouring. I proudly walk up to my owner and scratch at his feet. My owner is much taller than I, so he usually sits down with me. While my owner is watching, I make a point to walk around him, crawl under his legs, and usually go for a swim in my pond. He finds this behaviour entertaining and proceeds to pick me up and tell me how funny I am. This ritual is frequently completed with a special turtle treat of melons or dog food.

Resting is one of my favourite pastimes. During the warm summer months, I like to dig a hole in my yard and crawl into it. It is quiet, moist, and cool in my special place. During the cold winter months, box turtles like me hibernate by digging an even deeper hole in the ground and staying there until the warmth of the summer sun returns. My name is Albert and I am a very happy box turtle. It is a great life indeed!

Part III: Writing

All good paragraphs contain three main parts: the topic sentence, the supporting sentences, and the concluding sentence. Show your understanding of this by writing a paragraph to teach someone how to do something. For example, explain how to build a birdhouse, giftwrap a present, or set the table. Choose something you already know how to do and explain the steps clearly in your paragraph. Plan your paragraph by using a web with your paragraph ideas. Remember to compose strong descriptive sentences, and incorporate all the good writing strategies you have learned.
