W3 – Lesson 3:

Contact and Change in Meiji Japan

OBJECTIVES

By the end of this lesson, you should

- understand the motivations for the radical changes in Japan's model of organization during the Meiji period
- understand how Japan adapted to changes brought on by the transition from feudal to modern models of organization
- discover how changes resulting from adaptation affected Japan economically, politically, and socially during the Meiji period

GLOSSARY

Amaterasu – the Japanese Shinto sun goddess

black ships – the name given to Western vessels arriving in Japan

Charter Oath – a document that outlined the main aims and the course of action to be followed during Emperor Meiji's reign civil war – a war between factions in the same country

Commodore Perry – an American who negotiated with Japanese officials to achieve the goal of opening the doors of trade with Japan industrialization – developing industries on a large scale

Industrial Revolution – the change from producing goods by hand and with simple tools to using complicated machinery

Kyoto – the former Imperial capital of Japan

Meiji restoration – the period of time when the shogun lost his power and the emperor was restored to the supreme position. Meiji means “enlightened rule”.

oligarchy – a government in which all power is in the hands of a few people

Tokyo – the capital city of Japan, the seat of the Japanese government and the Imperial Palace, and the home of the Japanese Imperial Family

Treaty of Kanagawa – the treaty that opened the Japanese ports to United States trade, guaranteed the safety of shipwrecked U.S. sailors, and established a permanent consulate in Japan

W3 – Lesson 3: Contact and Change in Meiji Japan

Reading 1: The End of Isolation

Tokugawa Yoshinobu was the shogun of Japan and he was worried. Since the arrival of the black ships and the meeting with the American Commodore Perry several years ago, the people of Japan had been pushing for a change in the way things were done.

No longer were things debated in council chambers. Often there were riots in the streets. Some people were upset with the Treaty of Kanagawa, which gave the Americans privileges never before given to the “Southern Barbarians”.

Tokugawa Yoshinobu felt the loss of respect for the shogunate, and he could sense that tensions that were building would only get worse. He decided he must speak to the emperor and do the only honourable thing that remained.

To discover what Tokugawa Yoshinobu decided to do and what happened, read pages 327 to 329, 331, 333, and 335 in your textbook, Worldviews: Contact and Change. Then complete Activity 1.

Activity 1: The End of Isolation

Answer the following questions in complete sentences. If you are working in a classroom, you may discuss the questions as a group. If you are working individually, complete the activity and check your work with your learning facilitator or teacher.

1. What was Commodore Perry's strategy in getting the Japanese to open their country to trade and diplomatic relations with the Americans?

2. What did the Treaty of Kanagawa do?

3. What occurred in 1858? Why were many Japanese unhappy?

4. Why did the Japanese make deals with Perry?

5. What were the three proposed solutions to Japan's situation?

6. What were the events that led the shogun to resign?

7. What occurred after the shogun resigned?

Reading 2: A Changing Order

Like the Aztecs, the Japanese decided to observe the people who visited their shores. However, the Japanese had several advantages that Moctezuma and the Aztecs did not have.

Japan did not have nearby enemies that could join forces with the Westerners. The Japanese had more resistance to Western diseases. Finally, the Japanese had more time to learn about Western ideas than the Aztecs.

The Japanese had been able to control Western contact and maintain a policy of isolation for a long time, but the Americans were different. The Americans forced Japan to make changes and to face new realities.

To discover how the Japanese oligarchy was able to maintain a traditional lifestyle while adapting to the new ideas they encountered, read pages 336 to 338, and 340 to 342 in your textbook, Worldviews: Contact and Change. Then complete Activity 2.

Activity 2: A Changing Order

Read each statement carefully. If the statement is true, write T on the lines provided. However, if the statement is false, write F on the lines provided. Then rewrite the sentence correctly to make the statement true. If you are working in a classroom, you may discuss this activity. If you are working individually, complete the activity and check your work with your learning facilitator or teacher.

- _____ 1. The period when Emperor Meiji came to the throne and the government emphasized the importance of the emperor is called the Meiji Restoration.

- _____ 2. The shogun wanted to create a strong central government that could unite the country and rule it effectively.

- _____ 3. The Meiji leaders wanted to create a form of government closer to the democracies of the West.

- _____ 4. The Meiji leaders wanted to let Western countries take control of Japan as they had done in China.

- _____ 5. The daimyo lands were returned to the emperor and the daimyo were executed.

- _____ 6. The samurai system was strengthened during the Meiji period.
- _____ 7. Commoners were given rights in the Charter Oath. They could live where they wanted and take a surname. Peasants were also given their own land.
- _____ 8. The education system was reformed by the Meiji leaders.
- _____ 9. In Japan, traditional family patterns changed dramatically.
- _____ 10. Class distinctions disappeared.
- _____ 11. Rural peasant life remained mostly the same. Many remained illiterate.

Reading 3: Industrialization in Japan

The Japanese had been impressed by the gifts the Americans had given to them. The Americans were equally impressed with the gifts they had received from the Japanese. The result was both countries benefited from the exchange of goods.

The Japanese realized that if Japan was to avoid the division of their country by Western nations like the West had done to China, Japan needed to adapt quickly to industrialization.

To discover how the Japanese went about developing a modern nation, read pages 343 to 344, 346, and 348 in your textbook, Worldviews: Contact and Change. Then complete Activity 3.

Activity 3: Industrialization in Japan

To finish the activity, you must complete each given statement with the correct word(s) on the line provided. If you are working in a classroom, you may discuss this activity. If you are working individually, complete the activity and check your work with your learning facilitator or teacher.

1. In the West, goods were no longer made by _____ in people's homes and workshops. _____ did this work quickly and efficiently.
2. _____ were built to house many workers who produced _____ amounts of goods using increasingly complicated machinery.
